

California State University's Asian American and Native American Pacific Islander-Serving Institutions

Asian American and Native American Pacific Islander-Serving Institutions (AANAPISI) are defined under the Higher Education Act (HEA) as colleges or universities with an undergraduate enrollment that is at least 10 percent Asian American and Native American Pacific Islander. Additionally, at least half of the institution's degree-seeking students must be low-income. Thirteen out of the California State University's 23 campuses meet these criteria to compete for AANAPISI grants. AANAPISI funding can be used to strengthen overall institutional capacity and as a pathway for additional federal and private resources to assist underserved communities.

The California State University is the largest public four-year system of higher education in the country, with 23 campuses, 454,640 undergraduate and graduate students, and 63,357 faculty and staff. To learn more about the CSU, visit us at www.calstate.edu.
